

Human Rights and the Environment: Improving Supply Chain Compliance

2nd July 2021 | 3:00-4:45pm (GMT+8)

Online via ZOOM | Register at bcSD.my

In response to escalating global demand for corporate responsibility, it is becoming increasingly vital for companies to align their operations with sustainable initiatives. Post COVID-19, the path to economic recovery will require businesses to re-examine their approach to human rights and environmental sustainability.

A better understanding of human rights compliance in the context of company risk management needs to be developed, especially in relation to key export markets and comparison with global standards. Responsible business conduct is ever more important, especially when it comes to mitigating risks as a result of non-compliance.

In this online session, our esteemed speakers from a variety of backgrounds and industries will share knowledge and perspectives on improving supply chain compliance in the context of human rights and the environment. We will also have a moderated panel discussion inviting our speakers to share further thoughts, experiences, and lessons on improving supply chain compliance through concrete and effective approaches.

Session I: Perspectives on Supply Chain, Human Rights, and Environmental Compliance Session II: Panel Discussion on Improving Supply Chain Compliance through Concrete and Effective Approaches

Roberto Benetello

Executive Director of BCSD Malaysia
Welcome Note & Opening Remarks

Dr Radu Mares

Acting Research Director, Head of Economic Globalisation and Human Rights Thematic Area at Raoul Wallenberg Institute (RWI)
Corporate Compliance With Reporting Regulations and The European ESG Transparency Experiment

Sabrina Genter

Partner at Environmental Resources Management (ERM)
Aligning Local Supply Chains with Global ESG Standards

Victor Bernard

Programme Officer Regional Asia and The Pacific Programme at Raoul Wallenberg Institute (RWI)

Kiu Jia Yaw

Co-Deputy Chair at Bar Council Environment & Climate Change Committee
Developing Legal Guides for Human Rights Compliance in Supply Chain

Nurul Hasanah Ahamed Hassain Malim

Head of Group Sustainability at FGV Holdings
FGV experience in managing supplier's environment and social/human rights risks

