

Re-emerging & Resilient India

A call out for resilient manufacturing communities, to build back better

23rd September, 2020

The ongoing pandemic has evoked multiple conversations alluding towards both – facilitating a rapid recovery, as well as building longer term lasting measures. Stakeholder perspectives range across “green recovery” call outs for mainstreaming low carbon investments, or “new social contracts” that step-up responsibilities towards society, or “fiscal stimulus” easing out financial obligations, to a full-fledged “policy guidance on boosting self-reliant manufacturing. The time is now ripe, to further align and outline a common vision of this new world order, by bringing together various definitions that have come-up based on the need to have an immediate response. The “Re-emerging and Resilient India” virtual conference attempts to clarify and align the vision, address barriers and facilitate on-ground actions
