EXPO GUIDE

The Draft Day Expo is all about discovering your potential. This event is designed to help you explore and gather information, so you can start shaping a future that excites you! Whether you leave with a clear path or a list of new interests, you're one step closer to finding your ideal career.

▶ SENIORS

- Interviewing Seniors are encouraged to visit the booths of the companies they have interviews with to meet them and ask any pre-interview questions they have.
- Even if you didn't match for interviews, the Draft Day Expo is a chance to gather knowledge, make connections, and refine your career plan. You can learn valuable information that will help you in whatever career direction you choose. Whether you leave with new insights into a high-skill trade or simply feel more informed about the job market, the Expo is a valuable part of your overall career exploration journey!

▶ UNDERCLASSMEN

- Come Curious! The Expo is designed for you to explore, learn, and ask questions—no matter what stage you're at in your career exploration. Even if you already have an interest in a specific trade, take the time to check out other industries and job roles. Many underclassmen find their passion for a career they hadn't previously considered after talking with professionals at the Expo.
- Ask Questions. Talk to the professionals at each booth. They're there to share valuable insights about their industries, work environment and culture, job roles and day-to-day responsibilities, training programs and career growth opportunities.
- Learn About Training and Education Options. The Expo is not just about jobs—it's also about training pathways. Learn about the different kinds of training programs available, such as apprenticeships, certifications, trade schools, and on-the-job training. Understanding the education and training requirements will help you plan your next steps after high school.
- Think Long-Term. While Draft Day is a great event for seniors looking to make immediate career moves, as an underclassman, you have the advantage of time. Take this opportunity to learn about the various career paths available and start thinking about what you might want to pursue in the future. You can begin planning your high school courses and extracurricular activities to align with your career interests.
